

radical activity in london - july 2012

blacklist

update

blacklist is growing, with 100s of copies going out to those involved with eviction resistance [check details at the back] and existing squats, social centres and venues stocking the hardcopy - don't forget the pdf is also available with a few more things in and to let bl know if you want to print or disseminate it.

well done to palestine place who for two weeks last month lay down a high-profile, intense programme of events, talks, workshops etc on gray's inn road. finite squats seem to provide such bursts of energy from their participants in the knowledge that there's an end at which they get to sleep. meanwhile, the perpetual grow heathrow is waiting on a reserved judgement that could mean an alteration to almost 400 years of land-law, setting a precedent that could allow those who come together to take control of their collective futures to challenge landowners who aren't bothered about that sort of thing. which is quite exciting. so keep your fingers crossed. new spaces are opening up all over the place (anish kapoor's house and a re-squat of the foundry in shoreditch to name but two..), so listen to the grapevines while they build their notoriety and get down there to show support / hand out blacklists... finally, at the end of the month, the five gold coins of the olympics head to town - lets have a party, of sorts.

As always submissions, feedback or suggestions would be welcome,

Bl x
